

IDL Solutions, Inc.

A powerhouse! That's the image that comes to mind when pondering the enormity of the IDL Solutions story. This woman-owned, SBA 8(a) Certified business has served a formidable list of clients since its inception in 1993. That list includes the U.S. Departments of Health and Human Services, US Department of Housing and Urban Development, US Department of Justice, US Internal Revenue Service, US Department of State, the Wisconsin Departments of Administration, Corrections, and Revenue; Wisconsin Lottery, Miller Brewing Company, and numerous others.

IDL Solutions was founded by Baly Ambegaoker who was, and is, the driving force behind the company. Baly was a first generation non-English speaking immigrant to the United States and had to overcome the obvious obstacles that this caused during her academic and professional career development. No challenge, however, was greater than establishing herself as a professional business woman in the competitive world of IT Consulting.

Baly focused IDL on always helping to catapult its clients to maximum efficiency and success. To that end, quality and defined processes are paramount in the IDL approach. IDL boasts a successful appraisal at the SEI CMMI Level 2—an honor that can only be claimed by few organizations worldwide.

Combining expertise, care, experience, and insight, IDL delivers to its customers dynamic and thoughtful enterprise business applications, interactive technologies, and infrastructure management, and business process management. IDL also packs key partnerships with Microsoft, IBM, SAIC and others—partnerships all designed to offer IDL clients targeted, results-driven business solutions.

IDL clients benefit from Baly's leadership skills and professional experience and the power that automatically derives from employing only the most experienced professionals. IDL's consultants, engineers, analysts and managers are among the most credited and experienced that employers can hire in today's IT consulting market. To further drive IDL's ever-growing presence in the IT industry, Baly and her management team ensure continued training, as well as long-term, team-building cohesiveness for all its professionals.

As a leader, Baly is active in professional and charitable organizations. She has served as chairperson of the Wisconsin Women's Board of Directors by the Department of Defense, board member of the African American Cultural Council, the Council of Small Business Executives, the Governor's E-Government Council, Goodwill Industries Technology Business Advisory Council, Vice-Chair of the IAC Small Business SIG, and an executive board member of Wisconsin Women's Entrepreneurs. As an active participant in the international arena, she accompanied the then Governor of Wisconsin, Tommy Thompson, on missions to India, Australia and New Zealand. She has received the 40 Under 40 Award for Entrepreneurs in recognition of her business skills.

An office just outside Washington, DC in Vienna, Virginia housing IDL's Division of Government Solutions, a recent $4 billion ID/IQ contract award, and an array of appointments of industry veterans to key senior positions, continue to emphasize what IDL President and CEO Baly Ambegaoker set out to build – a Powerhouse!

SBA is pleased to have IDL as a member of its 8(a) portfolio and looks forward to the company's successful transition to the full and open market in 2009.
